ADDRESS TO THE DEAD.

A WEEK IN WALL STREET.

A GENERALLY HEALTHY MOVEMENT FREE OF SPECULATION.

No Scarcity Could Assume Any Real Feeling—Moderate Public Lending to the Stock Market—Foreign Markets Strengthen on the Bank of England Statement—Bonds Dull in the Week—The Situation in a Nutshell—The Effects of Three Bad Months Still Felt—The Foreign Markets.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The Times financial review says: The general sentiment of Wall street is healthy. No disturbance is in sight that might conceivably check the progress of business during the week. An apprehension exists that the market may at any moment have a bad break, and people who are most busy stocks are discouraged at the persistent waiting attitude. Yet, without any more satisfactory explanation yesterday's gain was more than the Saturday previous. The discouragement, therefore, tends to manifest more in the disappointment that at the market's refusal to advance than in any serious decline in the general list. The short interest from all the chaos of last week has failed at the beginning of an upward movement which it was feared would embrace all strong stocks, and the feeling of encouragement was correspondingly acute when the only persons on Change on Monday and Tuesday were those who had to, but these and have growing a little tenacious about their long stock, and are disposed to allow considerable room for fluctuation before they will be frightened into selling. Yesterday's gain of nearly 1 per cent in the general list was followed by a slight reaction to-day, which was not severe enough to discourage the bulls. Those who have been disposed to sell on the theory that the market was overbought have had their fingers burned, and the feeling is now quite general that the market is in a healthy condition for a further moderate advance. The bank statement of last week, which showed a loss of $3,000,000 in the surplus reserve, was a disappointment to the bulls, who had expected a gain of $1,000,000 or more. The statement of this week, which shows a gain of $1,000,000 in the surplus reserve, is a disappointment to the bears, who had expected a loss of $1,000,000 or more. The bank statement is, however, a healthy one, and the gain in the surplus reserve is due to the fact that the banks have been calling in loans and not to any increase in the deposits. The bank statement is not a factor in the market, and the fact that the surplus reserve has increased $1,000,000 instead of decreased $1,000,000 as was expected will not affect the market. WOMEN IN PUBLIC SERVICE

WHEN CHANCE FOR APPOINTMENT COMES THE CIVIL-SERVICE RULES.

Nothing in the Law to Prevent Their Examination, but Nothing Providing for It—Superintendent Lyon Hopes Women Generally Appear to Secure Clerkships—What the Civil-Service Commission Has Accomplished—Mr. McCulloch's Compliment—"Our Best Reports."

Washington Dispatch to New York Evening Post: The advocates of the employment of women in the public service will be much interested in the Civil-Service rules if they shall avail themselves of the opportunity to enter the competitive examinations. There is nothing in the Civil-Service law or rules to prevent the employment of women, but there is also nothing in it to provide that they shall be employed. Their employment depends solely upon the appointing power. It does not matter if the head of a bureau in the Civil-Service Commission is in favor of women who have passed successfully the competitive examinations, they cannot secure employment unless certified to some department, and the Civil-Service Commission certify only the names of those who stand highest in the examinations. If, therefore, the appointing officers have a prejudice against the employment of women they simply will not ask to have them certified, and scores of women who have passed excellent competitive examinations will remain unemployed for one very probable reason that the eligible lists are so much longer than the number of appointments. The fact is there are many of the women and women should who have managed to have themselves certified, and who are now at work in various offices, are those who have had political influence to secure their appointments. Many of these have been appointed from States where they have had no residence, and have been sent here to fill clerkships which, under the law, should be filled by residents of the District of Columbia

THE FOREIGN SITUATION.

People who thought that the defeat of Mr. Irvine and the transfer of the party to the control of the coalitionists would be the signal for a radical change in the temper of which speculators have found out their mistake by this time. There will probably be a "bull boom," great or small, but the outside of England, with its arrogant tenant markets, its unfavorable crop reports, and its record of bad failures, was no time for it to begin. There have for weeks been no obstacles for the bulls to make more than a moderate stand, while the bankers for doing second have been all but the most startling persons would desire. So far as the Irish land is concerned this only amounts to that the bargain has been distributed over a longer period of time and to therefore less damaging at any particular time than if the last were left to work out its own problems. If he had been allowed to go on without the intervention of the coalitions his foes would have gone to pieces suddenly some day and there would have been a great collapse in the stock markets. But there must still be the same process of liquidation, and the collapse must be put off, but the business will be unsettled gradually.

It is a disgrace to the New York Stock Exchange that such performances as those of Ives and Ferdinand Ward can be in progress so long without the intervention of the authorities of that institution, and it is by no means creditable to the New York banks that they can borrow invested so freely in such affairs as they have apparently been in the last month. The rules of the exchange and the regulations of the banks are profoundly very strict, and a man of small means and small acquaintance would be in for misfortune in anything not in accordance with ordinary practice, but such and even quite bold operations with great volumes have sent the Stock Exchange and the banks to work up a tremendous excitement, over hundreds of small speculators are specialists, and finally precipitate general disaster by the failure of the enterprise. There is something radically wrong in the management of the banks and the Stock Exchange when such things can happen.

The increasing competition among the railroads of the West is an immediate factor in the stock market, but the steady absorption of capital in enterprises that are not represented on the New York Stock Exchange is more important. Large investments are still being made in Southern lands, in coal mines elsewhere in the country, and in mines. The purchase of the Tamarack mine ranges for $4,000,000 by a Chicago syndicate is a typical transaction. A large proportion of such funds were once available for use in the stock market. The declining reserves of the New York banks show that the supply of ready money there within reach of the speculators is very small. The same is true of European banks. The Bank of England holds $15,000,000 less of gold than last year at this time and the Bank of France $6,000,000 less. The rise of capital is still universal. The Chicago National banks carry on an average $5,000,000 less in New York exchanges than in 1890. The borrowers of floating capital are thus scarce and treasurer for the international trade statistics. The balance of trade is considerably against this country, and has been for many months, but spasm a corresponding coming this way. The reason for this is that foreigners are buying our bonds and stocks, which do not appear in the statistics of imports and exports. They must be paid for, and then not only offset the excess of merchandise exports over imports, but bring an agio.

The course of general commercial business will depend to a great extent on the conduct of the crops, but it is not uncertain how much effect the corn has received, and the situation did not change greatly during the week. The commercial failures have come to be an important feature. It is not reasonable to look at a time when there is an unusually large number of such failures as an unmixed evil, for it implies that a large amount of rotten business is being cleared away, but the number of failures is certainly a serious matter.

THE DANGER OF A DEFEATIST.

Many intelligent persons find it difficult to understand the degree of composure to understand the degree of composure or resignation that the United Labor party exhibits at the result of the election. Its candidate for Governor has received a vote which, if it were to be counted as a vote for the principles of the party, would be a most encouraging one, and which, if it were to be counted as a vote for Henry George, would be a vote of confidence in him and his principles which would be overwhelming. Yet the party is not disheartened, and seems to be preparing for the next campaign with as much confidence as if it had won a victory. It is not easy to understand this attitude, and it is by no means creditable to the New York people that they can become reconciled so easily to such efforts as they have apparently been to the last month. The votes of the exchange and the regulations of the banks are profoundly very strict, and a man of small means and small acquaintance would be in for misfortune in anything not in accordance with ordinary practice, but such and even quite bold operations with great volumes have sent the Stock Exchange and the banks to work up a tremendous excitement, over hundreds of small speculators are specialists, and finally precipitate general disaster by the failure of the enterprise. THE ANTI-CROW AGITATION.

Though Mr. Chamberlain, apparently at the suggestion of the London Times and because the report of his representative has not received with a flourish of trumpets by the Unionists, has announced his intention to continue to give the Tories an independent support, reserving the right to vote against them when he thinks it required his objections with them, there is little doubt that the predominance of the Unionist League will be made the pretext for breaking up the Tory-Liberal-Unionist coalition. It is announced that Leonard Courtney, Stanley Spencer of the Cavendish and a former secretary colleague of Mr. Chamberlain, who has hitherto acted with the Unionists, will support Gladstone's motion condemning the action of the Government in regard to Irish affairs next Thursday. The anti-Unionist have a plan that Jesse College will support the Home Rule party on the occasion. This last is probably humorous. The fact that the recent elections in Ireland indicate the morning the position of the so-called Unionists. They are disposed to be hopeful for the present that Parnell have given data to return to their allegiance to the Gladstone party. As the result Gladstone, as the leader of the majority, will have other questions of the Salisbury, continued weakening of coercion is should or must subside. The Conservative commons were substantially a return to the Commons not to the Irish. And of these the particularities the Salisbury of those who particularly put a work will leave the House into the subscribe policies during the next week.

Mr. T. W. Russell, member of Parliament for South Tyrone, has also proved his connection with the anti-coercion, pointed his opinion against the Government. He is opposed to all coercion measures for the future. Mr. Russell is one of the few Liberal-Unionists who were elected from Ireland at the general election of last year. He has been called upon as a representative of the Liberal Presbyterians of Ulster, who have been afraid that home rule would be followed by religious persecution of some kind, do much to free a race cattle down on the enemy for the Tories. Dublin, though an Irish position, Mr. Russell is a Scotchman. Personally he has good relations with the voters of the entire county at the last election. Several of the Presbyterian ministers have contributed to the current troubles. Several of the Presbyterian ministers have also contributed to the current troubles. SUNDAY MORNING'S NEWS.

REVIEW OF THE DEVELOPMENTS OF "THE SABBATH" OF CHRISTENDOM.

Judgment's Statement of Fire & Co.'s Condition—A Fire Trust with $10,000,000 Capital, Which Will Turn the Profits $1,000,000 a Year—Several Prominent Members of the Advisory Board Conducted Financial Wing of Tammany and Democratic Party.

The condition of Fire & Co. appeared very favorable. The annual assets are put at $21,000,000, but most of the assets consisted of outstanding.

Mrs. Nicholas A. W. Fisher, aged 45, and her daughter Anna, aged 20, leaving their home for evening lessons, encountered several footpads on a New York sidewalk Sunday.

The prominent cotton manufacturers have combined to keep up prices.

The Southern Cotton Convention met in session. The chief department is crowded with sympathetic visitors, and prices ranged high for cotton living on the other of the day.

The Committee (Prince) committee had an informal conference (Judge Hunt) to confirm proceedings against the West Side Street Railway. The Court thinks that the company has no right to run cars on Sabbath streets.

Albert Ely produced and 1,000 people were at the Tabernacle (Rev. Dr. Hamilton) Sabbath.

Suits were brought against the Sabbath observers in and by the proprietors of a pleasure resort in the Lake Michigan Company, who claim that the Sabbath observers have no right to close the resort on Sabbath.

The proceedings of the Sunday Observance Committee of the Presbyterian Church, which met in session, were of a very interesting character. The committee, which met in session, were of a very interesting character. The committee, which met in session, were of a very interesting character.
